Alamofire for iOS Overview $19.99 App Size 3.3 MB App Screenshots PayPal Hello everyone! I am a programmer who has been using the API of the excellent Alamofire to enable PayPal payments on the iPhone and it has been going great. I am now looking to create a universal binary for Windows 8 and OSX and I am having a hard time getting the latest Xcode to recognize the Alamofire.framework. My OSX install is already up to date. I have tried going through the usual steps and changing the settings in the Build Settings of the project to no avail. I am wondering if anyone has a hack to get this to work. App Description The most beautiful and advanced payment system on the planet. With Alamofire, you can add PayPal's payment processing to your iOS, Mac, or web app in just four easy steps. No need to learn any new API, no need to write complicated SDK code, just learn how to use one single API: Alamofire. We got you covered for your iOS app or Mac app. Or if you are doing a web application on the Go, you can just create your web app and hook it up to the mobile PayPal payments API and let them make payments from your app, or for you, from your web app. Take control of payments! Alamofire is the de facto standard for sending API requests with one of the most complete sets of APIs in the world, including one for PayPal. - Send single and multiple payments using PayPal's Billing API. - Send single and recurring payments using PayPal

I have a Macbook Pro 15" Late 2013, and it has a problem where it shuts off after only an hour or two of use. The fan is making a high pitched noise. I've checked the case and nothing seems out of place. I'm wondering if there is a built in bug in the OS or a virus? I've run a virus scan. I have a Mac
