A: Fixed in the next build. A: This is fixed now. Thanks for the report. There was a server-side error in the issue tracker when looking up posts, which made it miss this particular page. Q: Javascript inheritance only returning 1 object Javascript inheritance was working correctly until I decided to add some additional functionality. Now the inheritance seems to be working, only that it's returning the same object for all new instances. var Person = function (name) { this.name = name; this.getData = function () { return "My name is " + this.name; }; } var Student = function (person) { this.school = person.getData(); }; Person.prototype.view = function () { return `${this.getData()}`; }; var bob = new Person("Bob"); var bobViewed = new Student(bob); console.log(bobViewed.school); bobViewed.school = "College" console.log(bobViewed.school); the above produces: My name is Bob College bobViewed.school seems to have overwritten the school property of the original Person object. I am unsure how to fix this. A: The view method is meant to display the name, but this.getData always returns "My name is " + this.name, so the default return value of person is always "My name is Bob" - which is always printed twice. Try console.log(bobViewed.school); instead. The present invention relates to the art of testing electronic systems and more particularly to an apparatus and method for testing electronic systems at a high speed.
