60 Hasphl2010dumpercrack. [Survey on current status and key challenges in preclinical drug development]. Preclinical research plays an important role in the drug development process. It can be divided into three stages, namely drug screening (preclinical phases I, II, III, I-II and III), ADME-tox studies and toxicological studies. In preclinical toxicology studies, the pharmacological safety of the most likely candidate drug is investigated before human efficacy study is conducted. However, significant challenges in preclinical research have been gradually identified. The key challenges that need to be addressed with a focus on ADME-tox and toxicological studies are highlighted in this paper. This review brings a number of thoughts on the key challenges that have been identified in preclinical drug development, which may have an impact on both the industry and the research community. The new 'Top Gear' series could be returning to BBC2 in 2016 The new 'Top Gear' series could be returning to BBC2 in 2016 BBC has confirmed that a new series of 'Top Gear' could be returning to BBC2 in 2016, with all three presenters expected to return to the show. Jeremy Clarkson, Richard Hammond and James May have all left the show in acrimonious circumstances after a 'fracas' with a producer, the relationship between the former presenters seemingly having become untenable. With Hammond having been the most vocally critical of Clarkson's views, it may be that he is somewhat reluctant to return to the show. Aprilia 250 John Prescott, culture secretary, tweeted this morning 'Top Gear' star presenter Hammond has maintained that he was "dismayed" to learn of the BBC's "inspector-generalstyle" inquiry into the incident and that he was "unfairly implicated". Telling Radio 4's Today programme on Monday morning, Hammond said: "I'm delighted and relieved to be here," before adding that he had been invited to return to present another series. "The BBC have said they'd be very happy for me to come back and I'm looking forward to that." Speaking to The Sunday Times, May said that he too was eager to return to the BBC2 show.
