When you install the Windows 10 Media Creation Tool, for all intents and purposes, you are installing Windows 10. You will see a screen to select "create Windows 10 install media" This is the window to the main Windows 10 installation screen. This is the screen that shows you the Windows 10 installation options. You will see the following options, which should be self-explanatory: If the above is not clear, here is what to do to create the Windows 10 ISO from a Windows 10 DVD ISO image (DVD ISO from WHS or other OS DVD ISO image) In the main window, click "Start" A Windows 10 installation window will open This is the Windows 10 installation window you will be using to create your new Windows 10 ISO. For this tutorial I selected use everything except my C drive (to avoid any partitioning conflicts or something that could be a problem). If you want to keep your existing Windows installation, select "Use existing partitions" If you are going to use the same hard drive space for the Windows installation as you are using for your other system, select "Use same drive" Select "OK" to create the Windows 10 installation Then you can either choose to create a CD/DVD disc in a writable medium, or you can download and save the Windows 10 install iso in the location of your choice. It has a taste of the Mediterranean and it's very multicultural too. As far as food is concerned, it seems the city is doing very well for its food culture. I've tried many restaurants and the 6d1f23a050
